

A KRE BTK Szabadbölcsház Tanszéke szeretettel vár minden érdeklődőt a

Szabadbölcsház disputák

című rendezvénysorozatának előadására:

David Runia

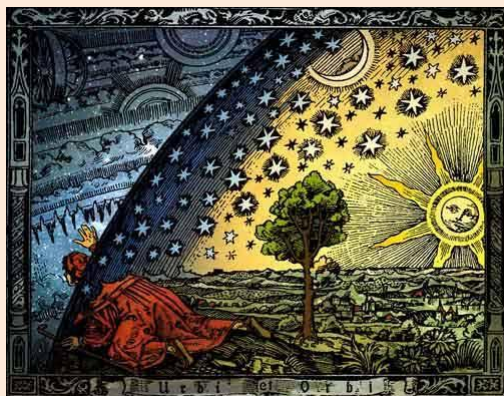

Honorary Professor, Institute of Religion and Critical Inquiry, Australian Catholic University, and Professorial Fellow, School of Historical and Philosophical Studies at the University of Melbourne; also Professor Extraordinarius, Department of Ancient Studies, Stellenbosch University, South Africa. Before his return to Australia, he was Professor of Ancient and Medieval Philosophy at Leiden University in the Netherlands (1992-2002). From 2002 to 2016 he was Master of Queen's College at the University of Melbourne. He founded the journal dedicated to Philo studies in 1989 and since 1997 has been its co-editor together with Gregory E. Sterling (Yale). Together with Jaap Mansfeld (Utrecht), he is the author of Aëtiana on the doxographer Aëtius (9 volumes; Leiden, Brill 1997–2020).

Recent Developments in Philo Studies

2026. október 1., csütörtök 17.00

KRE BTK, 1088 Budapest, Károlyi-Csekonics palota, Szivarszoba
Múzeum u. 17.

(Reviczky utca 6. felől is megközelíthető, ez esetben kérni kell az ottani portaszolgálat segítségét)

In recent years there has been an explosion of studies on the intriguing figure of Jewish exegete and philosopher Philo of Alexandria. The lecture will explore some of the trends that are occurring in a number of areas of Philonic research. These will include: seeing Philo in his context; the importance of Alexandria and Rome for his career and writings; new insights in his Judaism and Hellenism; his achievements as biblical expositor; and a new and pronounced emphasis of reception studies.

(Lecture accompanied by two page printed handout)

The talk is followed by a Q&A session and an informal reception.